The EC2U Alliance: vision and objectives

The “European Campus of City-Universities” (EC2U) is a multicultural and multilingual alliance composed by a consortium of seven universities from four regions of the European Union: the University of Coimbra, the University of Salamanca, the University of Pavia, the University of Iasi, the University of Poitiers, the University of Turku, and the University of Jena. The project aims for the constitution of a virtual European campus by developing synergies for the creation of spaces for teaching, researching, and boosting cultural and sporting experiences connected to the civil society of the consortium’s cities. Following the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), this broad vision is fulfilled, among other objectives, in the development of interuniversity master’s degree programmes, and in the creation of synergies for research, advanced training and extension.

This Multilateral Master’s echoes this vision in the area of Quality Education, proposing a ‘a la carte’ academic offer on linguistic, cultural and social diversity in Europe, both in presence and remotely. Sustained by a scheme of mandatory mobility among the partner universities, the student will obtain 30-90 ECTS in a minimum of two and a maximum of four universities of the EC2U Alliance. The student must also complete a master thesis co-supervised by members of two of the consortium institutions. By the end of the degree the student will be awarded his Master title by all the consortium institutions where they have successfully completed 30 ECTS, as well as a European certificate issued by the EC2U Alliance.

Multilateral Master’s Degree in European Languages, Cultures and Societies in Contact (MELCSiC)

Overview and general objectives:

Designed upon the existing academic offer, MELCSiC offers theoretical, methodological and practical training in the specific field of linguistic and cultural contact in European spaces and societies, answering to the challenges imposed by mobility and diversity. Its main target group is composed by students with higher education qualification in the areas of the Humanities and Social Sciences, enabling future professionals and researchers who intend to:

- Acquire deeper knowledge on linguistic and cultural landscapes in European societies;
- Deepen communication skills in multilingual and multicultural spaces;
- Develop sensibility and critical conscience regarding linguistic and cultural diversity;

- Develop and deepen intercultural competences adequate to the labour markets within the European space;
- Fostere rand implemente advanced methods for research in the academic fields that tackle questions regarding linguistic and cultural diversity and contact.

Specific objectives of this study cycle:

- To build specific knowledge – departing from the fields of linguistics, literary and cultural studies, Humanities and Social Sciences –, both theoretical and methodological (archival, textual, material, and digital), based upon historical, cultural and linguistic European elements and their contact zones;
- To understand and articulate complex ideas autonomously, to identify and solve problems in an original way in the context of advanced studies (inter- and multidisciplinary levels) about linguistic, cultural and social contact;
- To develop skills of reflection, as well as ethical, critical and social conscience regarding the use of knowledge;
- To foster skills of analysis, synthesis and formulation, as well as planning and organization of knowledge, its communication to different audiences, teamwork and handling cultural diversity;
- To develop advanced critical research on the fields of intercultural dialogue and communication in international profesional contexts.

Professional outcomes:

Specialized professionals in European languages and cultures, intercultural communication, and management of cultural and linguistic diversity. Depending on the profile designed throughout the cycle, the professional goals may be: multilingual project management; diplomatic activities in intermediate or advanced positions, both in governmental and non-governmental organizations; teaching and research; linguistic services; social communication; management and consulting in sectors of mobility and cultural and linguistic mediation.

Curricular structure:

The master's degree in the University of Coimbra is structured as follows:

- Three mandatory course units offered online by all the consortium's institutions: Discourses in Europe; Research Methodologies in Literatures and European Modern Languages; Research Methodologies in European Cultures and Societies (3 x 10 ECTS = 30 mandatory ECTS);
- Besides the mandatory online seminar in each of the first three semesters, the student defines their study plan according to the academic offer announced annually by each of the consortium institutions; these are optional course units in two major specialization areas: a) Modern European Languages and Linguistics, or b) European Literatures, Cultures and Societies (between 20 to 30 ECTS);
- The elaboration of a master thesis is mandatory in co-supervision (30 ECTS).
- OBS.: During the fourth semester, the students may apply for and carry out a traineeship period to support and provide data for the elaboration of the thesis.

Total ECTS: 120

Languages

Beyond being a multilateral study cycle, this is a multilingual master's degree. The student must demonstrate an advanced level (C1) of at least two European modern languages and proficiency in the English language. If the student demonstrates an advanced intermediate level (B2), they shall be committed to improve their linguistic knowledge as way to prepare and adapt to the demands of the institutions they wish to enrol in. By designing the study plan, the student may opt for course units in Portuguese, Spanish, Italian, French, German, Finnish, Romanian and English.

Mobility

Mobility is an essential part of this master's degree. The student will have to spend at least two semesters in different partner universities (in the second, third or fourth semester). It is mandatory for mobility at a different to take place in the third semester.

The student is free to choose in which university(ies) they wish to undertake their mobility period(s). The organization of student mobility will be articulated between the EC2U Universities Alliance's international relations offices, through means and grants available to all partners (Erasmus+, for example).
